In announcing this Romance, the publishers desire to call attention to it as one of the most absorbingly interesting productions issued in many years. The scenes of the story are laid in old South Carolina; the time, that epoch in our country's history when rude, unpracticed heroes sprung up like magic from every quarter of the Colonies, and wiving victory af ar victory from a well-insciplined sade experienced for. The well known character of Marica—bold, fearless, cathous, telf-enduring and self-sacrificing—his marvelous advantures, encounters, midmin to surprises, hair-brendth escapes, hardships, privations and heroot endurance; the feats of the hardy freendiers men composing his smeal but effective band; the romanic metheroments of his leading officers and socula; the faithfulness of his friends in his meet trying reverses; the feats and adventures of the planter, Neil Somers, and his gallant Swamp Stares de logalier with those of his trusty friend. Nat the Ecalphunter; the midnight surprisel; the fight in seam p and thicket, and final triumph of the champions of freedom, are brought up with a beauty, vivideness and strength which anchain the reader like some faccusating spell.
